Entrepreneurship / Small Business Startup and Management.

ORIC MNSUAM organized a day long training for the promotion of entrepreneurial mindset activities for ORIC's staff. Distinguished facilitator Mr. Shahzad Murtaza tendered his presentation in a very professional and gimmicky way. Mr. Shahzad Murtaza possesses voracious work experience in his field with working experience of different national and international INGOs. He has been instrumental in the promotion of entrepreneurial activities. He previously works with British Council Pakistan, DFID, and SMEDA and now working in his own company providing cohesive training throughout the country. The facilitator introduced participants how they may start new innovative businesses with possible opportunities with limited or “no” resources. He delivered his presentation thoroughly by explaining the indispensable role of money in any business. Mr. Murtaza explained to the participants in a very candid way about the maintainability of profit and human resources for the promotion of any business. He further explained with example how to reach the Summit of success. He said we need to encourage students to start businesses by utilizing minimum resources. The Trainer emphasized the importance of partnership and explained the modus operandi of distribution of work and responsibilities with other staff members. He further said that we need to get authentic affiliation for a successful business with relevant departments. During the heat of the discussion, he explained the important role of supply lines and marketing. He was of the view that most failed companies have useless marketing skills with irrelevant audiences. At the closing session, he explained that your credentials, planning, ability, capability, leadership, and good luck play a pivotal role in your success. In the nutshell, he was of the view that in less time you need to do more work, and with limited resources, you need to address your target audience. He appreciated the vibrant participation of ORIC staff with sheer confidence. The facilitator briefed the participants during the question answer session. Certificates were distributed among the participants from SMEDA.
